

02 · Support & resistance

FXC Master · Class notes (view only)

Topics in this lesson

- What they are
- Drawing zones
- Trading the reaction

Illustrative chart — for education only. Not financial advice.

Explanation

Support is a zone where buyers have previously stepped in; resistance is where sellers have. These are areas, not exact lines, and they represent memory in the market.

We draw zones from clear swing points and previous reactions, then wait for price to return and show a reaction before acting.

Patience at these zones — waiting for confirmation rather than anticipating — is what separates disciplined traders from gamblers.